Last night I was driving home along an empty motorway. Suddenly, I saw a car behind me – it came quite close. (0) Then / After it started flashing its lights. (1) First / In the end, I decided not to stop but (2) first / then I saw signs for a petrol station, so I decided to stop there. (3) After that / After driving into the petrol station, I parked in front of the restaurant. (4) In the end / Then I noticed the other car again, so I waited (5) after / before opening my car door. A man and a woman got out of the car and I could see they were police officers, so (6) in the end / first I got out and spoke to them. They explained that one of my back lights wasn't working and that's why they were following me.

This really happened to my aunt and uncle. (0) in the post/a letter/came one day. It said that a taxi would collect them at 6.00 the next Saturday evening. (1) to a show/arrived/with tickets/another letter. They thought it was a bit strange, but my uncle is a lawyer, with lots of important clients, and they thought the tickets came from one of them. So the next Saturday evening they took the taxi into the town. But, (2) going/into the theatre/phoned/my uncle/a friend who works for the police. (3) went/the show/to see/they and had a great time. (4) went home/they/in the taxi. They were worried when they arrived home, because the front door was open, but (5) was/OK/everything, because my uncle's friend was in the house, with two other police officers and the man who had tried to rob their house while they were at the show.
